

Mirror, Mirror: Reflecting on The Splendor of The Season

Let the glittering spectacle of freshly fallen snow give new meaning to bringing the outdoors in.

By Caroline Biggs – Published: February 16th, 2023

When the cold weather hits, nothing makes a client happier than retreating to a cozy, inviting home. No surprise then that some of the season's most sought-after styles are outfitted with light-reflecting surfaces and sparkling metallic finishes to help combat the wintertime blues. Of course, few finishes provide more shimmer than mirrored ones. "Mirrors are one of my go-to tools of design," says Charlotte, North Carolina-based designer Gray Walker. "Mirrored surfaces work in any space, from a kitchen backsplash to a powder room."

Right: A mirror-tiled hallway by Kim Pursley of Pursley Dixon Architecture leading to a bedroom designed by Gray Walker

